Narrow Escape

PROVINCETOWN Mass Oct 26 The Arctic schooner Florence Lynn supposed to be lost, arrived this morning The vessel sprung a leak near Sable island, on the 19th, and has been pumping day and night since The last morsel of food on board was ten this morning Capt Lyson reports that there has not been such an ice season north for years The crew are all well

Capt Tyron reports at Cumberland straits they took on board a number of Esquimaux men and women During the passage to Disco they were obliged to slowly work their way through 200 miles of ice, and the weather was very heavy the entire passage, making it necessary to keep the hatches battened down most of the time A Disco they expected to meet the expedition steamer, but after waiting many days in vain, on the 22d of August they started on their return to Cumberland straits On this passage they experienced several terrific gales, during one of which the vessel was hove to four days, drifting helplessly among immense icebergs During these four days death constantly stared them in the face They at length reached Cumberland straits, the 31st of August and remained nearly a fortnight to coal The 12th of September they set sail for home, and until they reached St Johns, September 26th, experienced a succession of heavy gales They remained there until the 12th and again sailing experienced heavy gales, during one of which the schooner sprung a leak, south of Sable Island, since when they have been obliged to keep a man constantly at the pumps. To add to the discomfort, the supply of provisions failed and was entirely consumed before reaching port The coldest weather experienced was 42 degrees below zero.

FOREIGN.

Ruined

LONDON, Oct 24 It is believed that the call for $25 00 per share will exhaust the means of small share holders of the City of Glasgow bank, and throw the burden of the assessment upon a few wealthy The assessment will be further increased, as the bank itself held such an amount of its own shares that about four and a half millions of the present call would have been assessed thereon. The first installment of the present call was made payable on the 22d of December, and the second on the 24th of February It seems inevitable that it will be followed by other and far larger calls on those not bankrupted by the present one

Determined.

CONSTANTINOPLE October 26—The British minister energetically insists upon the execution of the convention between the porte and England, abolishing sales and importation of slaves Layard demands the freedom of slaves who recently took refuge at the British consulate

S. Adieu, Tilden! Farewell, a long farewell to all my greatness!
This is the state of man; to-day he puts forth
The tender leaves of hopes, to-morrow blossoms
And bears his blushing honors thick upon him;
The third day comes a frost, a killing frost,
And when he thinks, good easy man, full surely
His greatness is a-ripening, nips his root,
And then he falls, as I do. I have ventured,

It opens in New England but soon passes to Colorado amid the scenery of which the events of the story take place The Rocky mountains make too imposing a back ground for the ordinary scene of a child's story and there is rather too deep an impression produced by the landscape unless the incidents should be a little more exciting A few more bears, Indians torna does and the like are demanded by the average boy who is invited to visit the Rocky mountains in a story book—and Princess by complaint that he is defrauded when he is put off with rosy mountain sunsets and a near view of Pikes Peak at sunrise The story is very domestic and affectionate one, like Miss Alcott, but appeals to readers of greater age than hers which I have found very fascinating to boy of seven years In Miss Alcott's book the interest is in the story more than in the author in Nelly's Silver Mine it is in both and perhaps for mature readers it is greater in the author than in the story The children are life like and natural however—their adventures are every way probable and well managed and the style of writing is charming—Springfield Republican.

The GORDIAN KNOT
So he severed it with his sword, and paved an
HIS CONQUEST IN PERSIA.

So it is with the people now, they have not the time to spare for higgling and dickering over their purchases, they prefer to trade with a reliable firm, where they know they can get
FIRST-CLASS GOODS AT BOTTOM PRICES.
Such a firm is that of
E. LEONARD & CO.,
With whom it is not necessary to resort to the distasteful "jewing down" process in order to reach reasonable figures We have a mammoth stock which we selected with great care, and special reference to the varied wants of the people of this part of the country Our long experience in the
CLOTHING AND FURNISHING TRADE.
Enables us to buy at close figures. We are thus enabled to give our customers not only the benefit of an immense stock and the widest range of articles from which to select, but also the very important advantage of always securing the best goods at the lowest figures. In these particulars in fact, in everything relating to our business
WE DEFY COMPETITION.
Our stock consists, in part, of a splendid line of Men's, Youths', and Boys'
CLOTHING!
Thirty styles of Overcoats and Pea Jackets. The finest and largest line of Furnishing Goods ever brought to Colorado, and at prices that cannot be undersold Our stock of Hats and Caps cannot be beat in the state, as regards prices, quality and variety. We have everything in the way of clothing necessary to dress men and boys for weddings, for church, for pleasure, parlor, street, business, ranch, freighting, mining, or what not. We have complete outfits in clothing for the rich, the middle class the poor, the large, the medium sized, the small in fact for men and boys generally, and indiscriminately.

YE EDITORS

How They 'Done' Alamosa.

An Enjoyable "First Annual"

Return of The Quill scratchers

Attached to the south bound San Juan express on Thursday last was a special car containing a party which was not large in numbers but perhaps the jolliest of any that had passed over the road in months It was composed of the members of the Colorado state press association, bound for Alamosa on their first annual excursion There was nothing in particular to characterize the party unless it was that each face wore an expression of content seldom seen on an editor's unless he had a big item in view The reason of this was that work had been left behind, shears and paste pot had been laid aside and every man had set out with the intention of having three days of unalloyed enjoyment

Upon the arrival of the train at Colorado Springs there was a general exodus from the car to the platform and during the five minutes which were spent here there was much comment among the bystanders as to who the party were—the blue badge of the association which each man wore eliciting the remark that they must be blue ribbon men going to hold a temperance meeting in Pueblo There were two additions made to the party here namely Willis Sweet of the Mountaineer and a representative of the GAZETTE Promptly on time the train moved on and two hours later drew into Pueblo where the great and good "Tom" Hensel received the party with open arms The thirty minutes for refreshments proved sufficient even for a newspaper man and not a mother's son of them was left behind as the train moved on at the expiration of that time Tom Bona couldn't go He said he was engaged at present in hunting up a lost editor of the Chieftain who was the cause of it

Dump mountain was gained in the darkness and from Veta Pass the train glided rapidly down the mountain to Fort Garland Here the party was met by a committee consisting of prominent citizens of Alamosa who presented an address of welcome which was received most heartily At 9 30 p m. Alamosa was reached and a half hour later, every man was eating trout in the dining room of the Perry house.

On Friday occurred the first annual meeting of the association, a report of which has already been given in these columns In the evening a complimentary ball was tendered the visitors which was largely attended by Alamosa's leading citizens The majority of the party returned home yesterday, while a few stayed out with sight seeing and the execution of the light fantastic, remained until to-day.

The next annual meeting of the association will be held in this city on the second Monday in July, 1879. We feel assured that our citizens will use every endeavor to make their stay among us both pleasant and profitable

A Chronometer Lock for the First National Bank

The First National Bank of this city will soon be supplied with one of the Mosler burglar proof safes and the Yale Time Locks This safe is the most perfect specimen of burglar proof workmanship yet constructed and will offer to the patrons of the bank the most positive security that science and money has been able to construct as a safeguard against the art of the professional burglar

The Yale time or chronometer lock is one of the most valuable and ingenious inventions of the age It consists of two distinct sets of chronometer movements made by the celebrated factory of L Howard & Co of Boston and placed inside an elegant lock case and so connected with the bolt work of the lock that either movement will lock or unlock it independently of the other thus preventing any damage or lock-out by an accident to one set of the works This lock closes its own gate and prevents any motion of the bolt work of the safe, and opens it again automatically at the hour previously set on the dials of the time works by the cashier of the bank, but are beyond his reach or control, when the doors are closed He cannot then open it himself until the hour in the morning set for opening, and if he cannot open it, of course no one can make him do it These magnificent locks are being very generally adopted by bankers, and the First National bank is worthy of credit for its enterprise in securing such protection for its own property and that of its depositors Messrs Comit & Greenhood, of Chicago, are the general western agents of these safes and locks, and J W Adams, of 390 Larimer street Denver is their representative for the state of Colorado

Unity

We understand a new preacher will soon make his appearance in our city Rev L R Wood late of Iowa brings his wife to spend the winter months for the benefit of his health and will improve the time while here in preaching to the friends of Unity hall and all friends of liberal preaching Regular services will be inaugurated in that building next Sunday No member and the public are cordially invited to attend Mr Wood is spoken of as a man of culture and good ability.

A Railway Rhyme

The following poem was read before the the state press association at its recent meeting by the author Mr W F Pabor

I

Southward the path of Palmer takes its way,
Recklessness the morning feet of fate
Across the valleys where the sunbeams play
Along the foothills where the shadows wait
The Ute's [illegible] centuries,
By which they [illegible] wand, is changed
And to the mountains various degrees
Springs up where once the savage Indian ranged

II

The path is narrow and the way is long
That leads to Montezuma's halls,
And nature in her mountain home is strong
In shining sands and stately rocky walls,
But man is master when his keels swarm
The waiting pathway of a railroad line,
And kill and pittance crown a work well done,
That links the north with the southern pine

III.

The seeds of cities spring upon the road
And loom to harvests, on whose ripening page
We read a record of the fair abode
Of happy homes to bless this later age,
Where culture nurtures and where grace delights
To hang in the warmth of love's bright fires,
That cheer us lifes wintry days and stormy nights
With all the happiness the heart desires

IV

The whistle wakes the echoes of the hills
And through the brush the startled deer bound away,
The cattle browsing by the limpid rills
In wonder watch the winding of the track,
And far above the mighty peaks uplift
Their pine crowned bosoms to cerulean skies,
Their robe of emerald edged with snowy drift
Where summer's sunbeams fade and freezing dies

V

I've watched the progress of our baby road
Since first its rails crept up the great divide,
I saw it pass me where the Fontaine flowed
Leaving a city by that stream's side,
Whose beauty like the beauty of a bride,
Is fair to see Old Colorado Springs
Lying in grandeur by the mountain's side
Draped in the shadow stately Cheyennes flings.

VI

And southward still, as year by year went by,
The ribbon of the narrow gauge unrolled
Through valleys where the homes of farmers lie,
Past foothills where the bold mesas of gold
Under the shadow of the Spanish Peaks
Where fair La Veta in her verdure rests
The whistle of the speeding engine shrieks
And echoes o'er the sage from their adamantine nests

VII

Confronted with de Christo, mighty hill,
The busy engine paused and puffed, as if
Here, Nature over engineering skill
Would triumph, if we ought to scale the cliff
But Palmer pointed up the rugged road
And Hunt with nervous finger traced the track,
And [illegible] with [illegible] and strode,
And standing far above the clouds, looked back,

VIII.

And beckoned onward for the Pass was won,
Dump mountain, yielding her proud victor crowned,
Round Inspiration Point the engine run
And the pine forests echoed with the sound
Then over all the land the word was sent
That Nature, captive at the feet of man
Offered no more her fortress invincible battlement
To stay the progress of the railway plan

IX

And now while railway sights the setting sun,
Through shade and sunshine, over mountain and
In Alamosa mingle now and won,
Like the waters of the Rio Grande
And [illegible] the hunting waters southward flow
With echoes of the hills from whence they rose,
To seek the sunny gulf to which they go
Through vales of verdure where the south wind blows

X

Now waiting for the word, the engine head
Is pointed southward to the ruined halls
Where ancient Aztecs, to their temples led,
Left rude carved serpents upon ruder walls
And soon the words will pass along the lines
To Mexico the choice of fruits and flowers,
The land of beauty and of blooming vines,
Of sunny bowers and enchanted hours

XI

All honor to the man whose mind could grasp
So comprehensive and so vast a plan,
Who hoped the links within whose shining clasp
The circles widen with the wealth of man
In ancient Rome they twined the laurel wreath
For all who honored or enlarged the state,
Let Colorado's laurels rest beneath
The brow of Palmer at Fame's railway gate

XII

When perseverance and when patience teach
Such lessons tending to success in life,
We feel [illegible] Let us [illegible]
To fill our measure in the halls of strife
Who sows a good deed plants a thing to grow
In after years a life sung shape, to crown
His later days with honor when the snow
Of old age on his shoulders falleth down

XIII

Life's works and deeds remain, for good or ill!
Oh, Brothers of the mystic press, behold

The white, unsullied pages we must fill
With words that upward lead the groping feet of fate
Let ours be such that mighty years will hold
Each earnest effort of the toiling race
Still those who reaching both the young and old
May live the better till the Master call

A Good Templars lodge and a Young Men's Christian Association are talked of It would be well to have both as there are few places where our young men can go to spend a pleasant evening in good society

Those of us who have been used to half a dozen inches of black sticky mud after snows such as we have just experienced can appreciate the gravelly soil of Colorado springs which is made all the better for travel in consequence of a deep snow or heavy rain

Put Yourself in His Place

The following is so full of good counsel that we think it not an inappropriate for a careful perusal by the readers of this paper. Of course it will not apply to any of them, but possibly they may know of a friend to whom they could recommend its sound advice

In these days when all society is rife with scandal, from the minister in the pulpit to the scullion in your kitchen if the bible edict "Do unto others does not impel exchanges with neighbors, this axiom should be all potent Let any man imagine himself in the position of one whose good name is flaunted to the world smirched with taint and dishonor many times unjustly too, let him say to himself, "How would I feel, were these rumors regarded to me and it will bring the case home to himself and serve to check an unchartable word far quicker than the precept of the golden rule Many a merchant has had his credit irretrievably damaged by his brother tradesman uttering an opinion oftimes erroneous many a woman's good name has been dragged in the mire never to be cleansed again and her fame turned away from an honest life by the gossip the scandal mongering of her envious sisters many a man whose spirit would have soared to eagle heights, has gone down to the grave crushed out of life by the slander of his fellows You who upon the blighted fortunes of another would build up your own greatness pause and put yourself in his place and if you are a man you will desist You who would traduce the virtue of a maid remember that you have sisters or dear ones whose honor is twined with your heart strings and the blow you strike at others may awake a cursed echo at your own fireside,

"For man has a shaft at random sent Finds mark the archer never meant

There are people standing at the head of our community to day in whose early lives indiscretions have been committed over which kind friends have thrown the mantle of charity and hidden them from the heartless world No man nor woman in either sex falls so low that their redemption is impossible if we but extend a helping hand and when we would be prompted to spread their shame would only put ourselves in their places
